Top news of the month

We conducted our inaugural TSG Invitational tournament in November which saw 125 CXOs come out and support our cause of building champions in golf.

6 of our players showcased their skills much to the delight of the participants who loved the format and are no doubt looking forward to next year's edition!

A short video from our nutritionist Ryan Fernando of Qua nutrition for our participants and any adult golfer who plays the game passionately!

3 tips from us

Expose your child to multiple sport

As difficult as it may be, exposing your child to multiple sport is important for them to become physically literate. The ABCs of long term athletic development are Agility, Balance, Speed and Coordination which will give your child an advantage over the rest of the kids.

Watch your language

As a sporting parent you must watch what you say as it is important to build your child's self belief during the formative years in sport. A simple thing like asking "why" the performance was not good will hurt a child's self image and belief. Focus on the positives and say things like "I really enjoyed watching you play". This will go a long way building a love for sport as well.

Chose a mentor over an instructor

Most young sportsmen don't need instruction. They need mentorship so when choosing a coach for your child look for qualities that tell you that the person will inspire and motivate your child to be the best that they can be.

2 quotes from others

"If you watch a game, it's fun. If you play at it, it's recreation. If you work at it, it's golf."

-Bob Hope

"To find a man's true character, play golf with him."

-P G Wodehouse.

1 question for you

What's the most important quality you would want to build in the young budding sportsman that is your child?

First and foremost...

TSG Academy has been a dream and to now be 6 years into this journey is a great feeling.

Helping youngsters achieve their potential in the sport in our environment of excellence comes with great responsibility and I am proud to say that all teams have worked hard with passion and dedication.

Last year our highlight was the Amateur and Junior National championships being won by academy players Aryan and Shaurya.

The players have had a great year and we are looking forward to a good month with Aryan vying for his 3rd National Championship in a row in Mumbai next week.

Wishing you all a very happy and golf filled new year 2023!!
